2.5.4 OPPORTUNITIES PROVIDED FOR THE STUDENTS FOR MIDCOURSE IMPROVEMENT OF PERFORMANCE IN THE EXAMINATIONS

Midcourse improvement is considered as a process of evaluating and enhancing instructional strategies for the benefit of students who are observed to be performing less than average during the course of the academic

The goal is to institute measures in the midcourse of the academic year to ensure better academic performance of the students by the time they take up final exams of that particular academic year.

The following opportunities are provided for students for midcourse improvement:

- Counselling sessions by faculty of the respective departments to know the difficulties of the students and give guidance and support and to take measures to address the shortcomings
- Develop individualized study plans and setting realistic goals and breaking it into smaller achievable steps
- Peer peer teaching (pairing slow learners with advanced learners)
- Group discussions
- Special classes
- Discussing answers to theory papers by an allotted faculty
- Re writing the theory paper
- Presenting the clinical cases/ practical tests
- More formative assignments/tests
- Providing additional reading resources which simplifies learning

2.5.4 POLICY DOCUMENT ON MIDCOURSE IMPROVEMENT OF PERFORMANCE OF STUDENTS

Those students who are not performing well the student attendance, completion of home and other assignments is strictly monitored

After identifying the slow learners from the institutional policy remedial measures are implemented

Definitive criteria for identifying slow learners: Students who score less than 30% in theory/practical in internal assessment

Other optional attributes: Demonstrate difficulty in comprehension, retention and recall of subject content either in written tests or during clinical discussion. Lack the initiative or drive to bring about a change in approach to learning.

The performance of the students is reassessed through special tests, assignments given to students

Regular monitoring of student's performance is done by respective department faculty and mentors

Priority is given for implementation of continuous internal evaluation

All academic support needed by students is offered by faculty

Feedback is given to students on their performance in the remedial tests and additional measures if any to be undertaken for further improvement are suggested.

Suggestions include improving reading & writing skills, improving studying techniques and retention capabilities and structuring of long answers & short answers.
